

SAY MR. MAN!

Here's Something to THINK About!

After a Hard Day's Work

What form of amusement could better relax both muscle and brain than an evening of GOOD MUSIC—in your own home—where your slippers and smoking jacket add to your comfort?

You come in tired—literally “worn out”—too tired to dress for the theater or club—yet you want AMUSEMENT!

NOW! Suppose you had a player-piano! Just the thing! You'd get your favorite roll, make a dash for the player and then, with the first soft strains of music—you'd forget work—business cares—everything! except you're mighty glad you bought that player!

And say, why not make it the BEST?

That's the BEHNING!

SAN FRANCISCO, November 25.—The federal grand jury investigating the attempted smuggling of Chinese into this port on the steamship Mongolia, on which eighty-six oriental stowaways were discovered, heard testimony, it became known today, to the effect that $70,800 would have been distributed among the conspirators if the contraband aliens had been landed.

The inquisitors were told, it was asserted, that $800 a head was the price paid for Chinese actually set ashore, and that the “collections” were divided among whites and Chinese.

DID NOT OWE PLACE TO BOOKER WASHINGTON

Son of Judge Jones Corrects Statements in “White House Luncheon” Story.

Says Former President Cleveland First Suggested Appointment of His Father.

To the Editor of The Star:

In the Birmingham (Ala.) Age-Herald of November 21, under the heading, “That White House Luncheon,” appears a clipping credited to The Washington Star. The clipping purports to give a “true version” of the so-called luncheon which Booker Washington took with President Roosevelt.

Inasmuch as this alleged “true version,” furnished by an unnamed person, who is described as a “lifelong friend of Washington” living at the National Capital, mentions the name of my father, the late Judge Thomas G. Jones of Alabama, and pretends to state the true facts concerning his appointment by President Roosevelt, I feel it my duty, as a son of Judge Jones, to correct the many misstatements of fact contained in the article, and to state myself what I personally know to be the facts. For the sake of keeping the record straight and as a simple act of justice to the dead, I feel sure that you will take pleasure in giving my statement space in your columns.

Disputed Story of Luncheon.

The substance of the clipping reproduced in the Age-Herald from your paper is that “early in the summer of 1902” there was a vacancy on the federal bench in Alabama, and that Booker Washington was summoned from Alabama to the White House by President Roosevelt, who asked him to recommend a “man for the place.” The article then states that Washington suggested former Gov. Thomas G. Jones, father of the writer, and that the President then said to Washington: “I want you to go to him (Gov. Jones) and say to him that you are authorized to offer the place to him, and say to him that if he is appointed it will be solely on your recommendation.” According to the anonymous author of the story, Washington hastened to Alabama, saw my father at Montgomery and returned to the White House in three days with a message from Gov. Jones; that Washington found the President at luncheon, and that the latter insisted that Washington “have a bite with him,” etc., while he delivered the message from Gov. Jones. The article states that the vacancy on the federal bench in Alabama, to which Gov. Jones was appointed, occurred in the early summer of 1902. As a matter of fact the vacancy took place October 1, 1901, when Judge Bruce died. The article further states that the so-called luncheon took place also in the summer of 1902. This statement is likewise incorrect. The luncheon took place in 1904, nearly three years after Gov. Jones' appointment to the judgeship, cursory reading only will suffice to show that the author drew largely on his imagination when framing the alleged “true version” of the luncheon.

Facts Are Well Known.

The facts concerning the appointment of Judge Jones are well known here and at Washington. The President was unable to find a republican of sufficient ability and experience for the office. He determined to appoint a democrat with such a record that he could not be attacked. He appointed former Gov. Jones. According to the late Senator Pettus of Alabama, it was the best appointment a judicial officer made in the south by a President since the civil war.

A few years ago when a designing demagogue was attempting to prejudice the people of Alabama against Judge Jones by charging that he was appointed to the bench at the instance of the railroads, Mr. Roosevelt wired my father as follows: “No railroad and no railroad official had anything to do, directly or indirectly, with suggesting your appointment to me. You were suggested to me first by ex-President Grover Cleveland in a personal letter to me.”

While Gov. Jones' name was under consideration, though unknown to him, Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, former minister to Spain, the friend of both Mr. Roosevelt and my father, John M. Harlan of the United States Supreme Court, Gen. John B. Gordon, on whose staff Gov. Jones served during the civil war, Senators John T. Morgan and Edmund W. Pettus, both my father's warm personal friends, and others were urging his appointment. Booker Washington made no trip to Alabama and had no talk with my father about the judgeship. My father first knew that he was being considered for the office when the Rev. Edgar G. Murphy, formerly the beloved pastor of St. John's Episcopal Church at Montgomery, my father's and Mr. Roosevelt's friend, informed him that he (Gov. Jones) could have the office if he wished it. A day or two later my father was appointed to the office.

Approved by Washington.

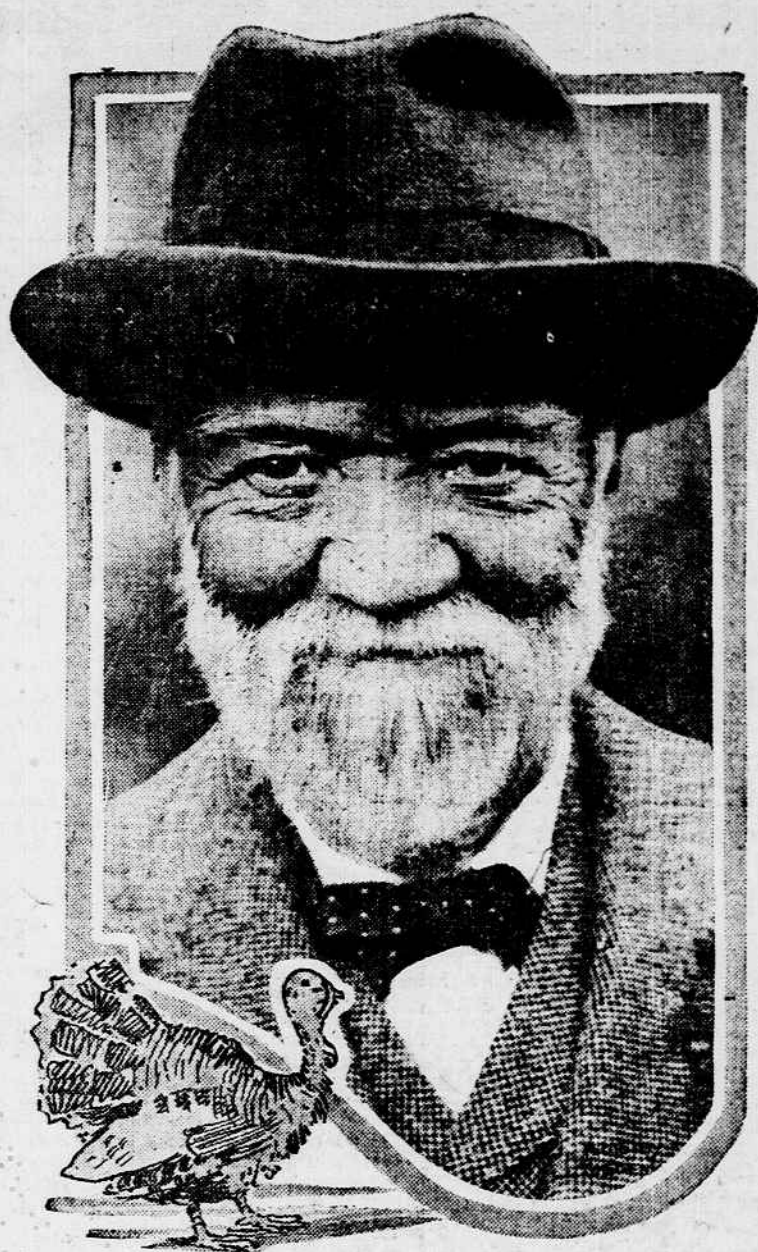

Booker Washington, while talking with the President, shortly before the appointment was made, about welfare work for the negroes, learned that Gov. Jones' name was being considered, and he told the President what he knew of Gov. Jones' character and qualifications. This is the only possible foundation for the erroneous and incorrect statements made by the unknown author of The Evening Star article.

In this connection I might add that a few years ago when an unscrupulous politician had made a tirade against my father because Washington had told the President that Gov. Jones' appointment would be welcomed by both whites and blacks, my father, in a public interview, said: “If it was a slur at Washington because he favored the appointment, it is a slur also at all who approved the appointment, and there was universal approval of it by our senators, Morgan and Pettus, state officials, Supreme Court judges and the press and bar throughout the state. It was intended as a slur at me because a great negro thought my life and conduct was such that I could be trusted to enforce the right in the name of a man that his character and life are such that the humble as well as the influential trust in the sense of justice.”

THIS IS HIS BIRTHDAY.

Andrew Carnegie was born November 25, 1835, in Scotland. He is, therefore, eighty years of age this Thanksgiving. This is the way he looks today. The photograph was taken a week ago.

ANDREW CARNEGIE IS 80 YEARS OLD TODAY

Friends and Associates of Former Years Congratulate Him at New York Home.

NEW YORK, November 25.—Andrew Carnegie is celebrating his eightieth birthday anniversary today in quiet fashion at his home here. A few friends, mostly comrades or associates of his earlier years, called to tender their annual congratulatory and tonight he will entertain others at the family dinner.

Asked for a birthday message, he said: “All goes well with me. The world grows better and we are soon to see blessed peace restored and a world court established when, in the words of Burns, ‘Man to man the world o'er shall brothers be for a’ that.’”

Day Is Observed in Pittsburgh.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., November 25.—Addressing the students of the Carnegie

Institute of Technology and a large number of invited guests at the celebration here of Andrew Carnegie's eightieth birthday anniversary, Dr. Henry D. Pritchett, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, said:

“The most noteworthy thing about Mr. Carnegie's preaching of the doctrine of conservation of wealth is the fact that his practice has squared with his preaching. The great bulk of his accumulations, nearly $400,000,000, has been turned back by him to the public to be used in the cause of human betterment. He is today a man of moderate fortune. This fact is the first astounding accomplishment to which the historian will point when he comes to estimate Mr. Carnegie's services.”

The celebration, which began Tuesday and terminated last evening, was attended by hundreds of more leading educators from various points of the country, who were the guests of the institute.
